Dan Miller is an internationally renowned concert organist, composer, and educator with a lifelong career in performance, teaching, worship, and organ design. A former Dean of the Fort Lauderdale Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and longtime Adjunct Professor at George Fox University, he recently retired after 26 years with Rodgers Instruments, helping shape organs heard worldwide. A church organist since age fifteen, he has performed with orchestras, recorded 22 CDs featured on NPR's Pipedreams, and continues to celebrate new organ installations through concerts, workshops, and consulting.
